ANNOUNCEMENT OF WINTER MEETING

The Tuscaloosa Chapter will host this year's Winter Meeting, to be held December 7 at Ferguson Center, University of Alabama. There will be a number of speakers and sessions of contributed papers and field reports. A more detailed program is included in this issue of the newsletter, and the December issue of the newsletter will carry the complete program.

The key speaker for the meeting will be Dr. A. K. Guthe, Director of the McClung Museum, University of Tennessee, Knoxville. Dr. Guthe will speak on the TVA sponsored research in the Tellico Reservoir on the Little Tennessee River. This was one of the largest Southeastern archaeological research projects in many years, dealing mainly with the Historic Cherokee occupation of the area.

For those members who wish to bring exhibits, a guarded display room will be available. Lunch will be buffet-style, so make your reservations early.

The state officers and directors and the host chapter urge everyone to attend this year's meeting and help make it one of the best ever.

HOPES WANING FOR HISTORIC TRAIL

Hopes for a federal scenic walking trail across South Alabama and portions of Georgia and Florida appear to be waning as the bill lies idle in Congress.

Alabama environmentalists had been pushing for the bill-introduced first by Senators John Sparkman and Jim Allen-to have the federal government re-trace the path made famous before the Revolutionary War by William and John Bartram. The Alabama portion of the trail would wend from the Chattahoochee River to the Montgomery area, then southwest to Mobile Bay. It was along the trail that the Bartrams recorded some of the first accounts of plant growth found in this section of the country. (Taken in part from The Birmingham News, September 10, 1974, Alabama Amblings by Frank Sikora). (Editor's Note: At the Summer Meeting the Society agreed to push for the establishment of this trail... have you written your legislators to voice your support?).

STONES & BONES

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH ALABAMA ARCHAEOLOGY

Mr. Marvin Hoyt, USA Archaeology Lab Supervisor, has left for graduate school in American Studies at the University of Wyoming. While attending the University of South Alabama, Marvin prepared manuscripts on the conservancy of silver coins from a Spanish Treasure, the Alabama River Forts, and he co-authored Archaeological Excavations at Fort Mims: 1973 with Read Stowe. The latter report has been selected by the National Park Service for publication.

Mr. Mike Rushing, who holds a BA in History and a LLB, has joined the USA Archaeology Lab staff. During the past two months Mike has been Field Supervisor on the Dow-Badische Nannahubba Bluff salvage project. At this time test excavations have been conducted at five sites on the Bluff. The sites range from Early Woodland (Bayou La Batre/Tchefuncte) to historic.

Excavations will begin in the next several weeks at the site of the I-65 bridge on the Mobile River. Two sites, one historic, the other a shell mound, will be excavated. This work is being funded by the Alabama Highway Department.

Mr. Read Stowe, USA Archaeologist, is conducting research for NASA on Remote Sensing Techniques on archaeological site surveys. To date we have compiled an extensive bibliography and are evaluating various types of remote imagery and ground truth on sites located on the North Central Gulf Coast. Anyone interested in the application of remote sensing for site surveys may obtain more information by contacting Read Stowe.

EUFULA'S OLD CREEK TOWN PARK

David L. DeJarnette, Curator of Mound State Monument at Moundville, Alabama, recently stated that the Indian village site at Eufaula's Old Creek Town Park is potentially very significant. In the early historic era, the site represents one of the few historically significant Indian villages left above water after the Walter F. George impoundment was created. DeJarnette's opinion is based on a study done by the University of Alabama in 1960 and 1961. The Indians who inhabited the site were probably closely related to later Creek Indians. The City of Eufaula has been interested in the park site as the location for a recreational complex. DeJarnette has recommended limited construction on the village site until funds can be raised for further excavations. (From the Valley News Digest of the Historic Chattahoochee Commission, Vol. 2, No. 8, August 1974). (Editor's Note: the complete report on the University excavations in the Walter F. George Reservoir is being published by the University of Alabama Press, funded by the Historic Chattahoochee Commission, and is expected to be released later this year.)

HAVE YOU PAID YOUR DUES FOR 1975 YET???

THE HUNTER'S BOTTOMS DIG

On October 5th and 6th the Choccolocco Archaeological Society planned a trip to Foster's Bottoms in Randolph County. The chapter president, Cecil Stedham, devoted much time to arranging this exhilarating and rewarding experience for the chapter members. Unfortunately only a handful attended. The chapter had great hopes that practical experience under the guidance of Bruce Bizzoco, Field Supervisor on this project for the University of Alabama, would pull out the entire membership (and hopefully, some guests) for a pleasant two days.

Unfortunately, the attendance was less than minimal, though the weather was ideal, and Bizzoco made a special effort to give us two days of his time for this expedition. The Bulletin Editor who is given to frequent speeches about the need of practical experience in this area, was among the missing (due to a previous engagement) and is presently eating a large dish of crow in big bites relative to her non-appearance.

A report will be given at the October meeting about this two day affair by those attending, but it is interesting to know that this work will continue for three years, covering an area of 71 sites, with year round work (rain permitting) before the dam is built for the Rother L. Harris Reservoir. It is also interesting that the Alabama Power Company is financing this work in the interest of Indian History, so remember this when you pay your next electric bill.

Weather permitting, our chapter members have been invited to come again and participate. Undoubtedly, those who are really interested will accept the invitation. In addition to the work in progress, the area itself is attractive. (Taken in part from the SMOKE SIGNAL, the bulletin of the Choccolocco Archaeological Society for October 1974).

A NOTE OF THANKS

My thanks to everyone who has helped spread the story of archaeology. I know many people have given talks and that good write-ups have appeared about the work of amateurs and professionals. I have seen some of this publicity and have heard about some of it. I would like to have a more complete record of what has appeared this year. If anyone would send me either a copy of any articles from local papers, or at least tell me of these write-ups and the paper and date that they appeared, I certainly would appreciate it. I see the Birmingham News regularly but not on Sunday as a rule. There have been some good reports in STONES & BONES, thanks for these. Perhaps the chapters we do not hear from have nothing to report!

HARD TIMES TRACED BY GEORGE ALEXANDER OF THE LOS ANGELES TIMES

The Anasazi Indians who lived on and around the lofty tabletop of Mesa Verde in southwestern Colorado more than 700 years ago were a talented and inventive people who domesticated the turkey, fashioned beautiful jewelry and pottery and built apartment complexes on the sides of steep canyon walls.

And when times were hard, the Anasazi killed and ate other Indians.

Increasingly, archaeologists who are excavating the ruins of Anasazi settlements in the Four Corners region of Colorado, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico are coming upon grisly evidence - human bones which had been butchered and broken open for their marrow, human skulls cleaved for their edible contents.

"There are now about eight sites in the southeast United States, six of which have come to light in the past ten years, that contain evidence of cannibalism," said Paul R. Nickens, graduate student in archaeology at the University of Colorado in Boulder. He has helped to unearth one of those sites.

What archaeologists and anthropologists find surprising about these sites is not so much the fact of cannibalism. They have long known that some tribes, such as the Iroquois, incorporated it into certain ceremonies and rituals. The surprising part is the suggestion that the eating of human flesh was a more widespread practice among North American tribes than earlier believed.

"These discoveries," said Ronald R. Switzer, the general superintendent of Mesa Verde National Park, "show that cannibalism was much more extensive than people had thought. Not extensive in volume, but extensive in geographic distribution."

Details of the discoveries referred to by Switzer were contained in reports on Anasazi sites presented to the annual meeting of the Pecos Conference, an archaeological-anthropological meeting held recently on the grounds of the park.

Nickens, for example, told the conference about a 22-room pueblo which a Colorado University team, including himself, had excavated in Mancos Canyon, just south of the park, during the summer of 1973. Inside the rooms, they found the remains of at least 33 individuals. The fragments were predominantly those of long bones - arms and legs - along with skulls. "There wasn't a whole bone in the bunch," Nickens said.

Vertebrae, torso and pelvic bones were conspicuous by their absence, he added. To the Colorado archaeologists this suggested that the victims - apparently in their mid-20's, but of indeterminate sex - had been killed and cut up elsewhere. Only their meaty parts were carried back to the pueblo by the Anasazi for consumption. Different artifacts found in the ruins along with the bones cause the Colorado researchers to believe that the macabre meal probably took place in the 13th century - a hard time for the Anasazi & the victims!

NATIONWIDE COVERAGE

On page 15 of the August 21, 1974 issue of COIN WORLD, is a large photograph of N. Read Stowe, USA Archaeologist, weighing silver pieces of eight. The caption reads: "Anthropology instructor N. Read Stowe of the University of South Alabama is the supervisor of the cleaning, preserving and recording of the 5,000 Spanish silver coins dredged up off the Louisiana coast in 1973. Here he weighs in a group of silver pieces of eight."

AHHHHH! TWO MORE PEOPLE WE HAVE FAILED TO EDUCATE

The third field season of archaeological investigations within the Gainesville Lock and Dam Reservoir ended August 30, 1974. One of the most important sites in the reservoir, 1Gr2, underwent extensive excavation and more work is planned for the future. Site 1Gr2 is important in that it illustrates all of those cultures which have inhabited the Central Tombigbee River area from 8000 BP until 1830 AD in a stratified context.

Shortly after the dig had been closed down and a newspaper article released on the project, the field supervisor and several crew members revisited the site on a Saturday afternoon. Standing in the middle of two tremendous holes were two pot hunters, one of whom had driven from North Alabama to dig the site. The other was a past member of the Alabama Archaeological Society, who proceeded to tell us that he had dug in almost every part of the state and that he probably had one of the largest collections in Alabama. He had little conception of the information he was destroying so that he could have a few additional "pretties" for his mantle. He was quite proud of being an amateur archaeologist, but is apparently unaware of the fact that there is a difference between an amateur archaeologist and a pot hunter. The archaeologists at the University of Alabama and other institutions around the state are racing against time to salvage sites being destroyed by dams, bridges, highways, etc. Why do we also have to contend with pot hunters?

One of the major aims of the Alabama Archaeological Society as stated in the constitution of the society, is to educate individuals in the proper method of preserving archaeological sites thus preserving the prehistory of the state. We have obviously failed to reach these two and others like them. Many individuals seem to have the mistaken notion that once an archaeological crew has closed down an excavation, that it is then permissible to dig the site. The problem is that future excavations may be planned for the area and uncontrolled digging destroys the information that would be gained by future professional excavations. Perhaps if we had managed to keep this individual in the society we could have made him understand the damage he is doing around the state, and in that way he would be helping and not hindering preservation of the past. This whole incident just goes to show that we must all try a little harder and speak a little louder so that we can prevent future occurrences such as this.

(Ned Jenkins, Mound State Monument)

A NEW NAME! A NEW CONSTITUTION! THE ANNUAL MEETING!

The Society for the Preservation of Early Georgia History (SPEGH) voted to change the society's name back to that of Georgia's original archaeological Society, the Society for Georgia Archaeology. Included in the business meeting was the acceptance of a new constitution, by-laws and interim officers. SPEGH, a member of the ESAF, was organized in 1950, and has over the years published "Early Georgia." This journal received recognition as a noteworthy record of Georgia archaeology and history. "Early Georgia" has not been published for 17 years, due not so much to lack of funds, but to the fact that articles meeting the high standards of the early publication were not submitted. In the last few years, Gail (Secretary-Treasurer) and Frank Schnell (President) have attempted to revitalize the organization. They have published the SPEGH Newsletter several times a year "as needed" and attempted to reach all members and others interested in Georgia archaeology and history. The newsletter will continue to be published quarterly. "Early Georgia" will be the annual publication under the guidance of Managing Editor, David Hally and Editor Marilyn Pennington.

The Annual Meeting of the Society for Georgia Archaeology was held at Mercer University, Macon, Georgia on October 12, 1974. If you are interested in becoming a member the dues are: Active $6.00, Student $3.00, Institution $12.00, Life $100.00 (or more) and Benefactor $500.00 (or more). Dues should be sent to Gail Schnell, Columbus Museum of Arts and Crafts, 1251 Wynnton Road, Columbus, Georgia 31906.

ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY COUNCIL

One of the Alabama Archaeological Society's very good friends, John W. Bloomer of the Birmingham News is the state chairman for the Environmental Quality Council and Robert W. Gay of Standing Rock, Alabama is a member of the council. The work of the council is extremely important for the state of Alabama and we are proud to have such prominent society members involved in this work.

THE AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR CONSERVATION ARCHAEOLOGY

ASCA is a new national organization, members and readers should be aware of and note. The basic organization came about at the Cultural Resources Management Conference held in Denver, Colorado April 11-12, 1974. This conference was attended by about 125 archaeologists and agency officials from 17 western states. Concern among this group for better organization, communication and standards of those involved in contract and conservation archaeology and the imminent passage of an amended Moss-Bennett Bill prompted their action. Objectives of ASCA as listed in the newsletter are: to provide and facilitate interchange between archaeologists involved in contract archaeology and the various agencies and institutions interested in securing the services of professional archaeologists under contract arrangements; to provide a professional forum of concerned and involved archaeologists on the topic of certification and licensing of archaeologists; to become a daughter society within the Society for American Archaeology and the American Anthropological Association. The officers Pro Tem are: William Mayer-Oakes, President; Floyd Sharrock, Secretary; Don D. Fowler and Alma Smith, Editors. The Steering Committee includes Adrian Anderson, Larry Banks, Hester A. Davis, Davis S. Dibble, Edward B. Jelks, Tom King, Don Miller, Jack Hughes, Alexander J. Lindsay, Jr., and Raymond H. Thompson.

The following is a summary of some of the activities directed toward the establishment of professional standards. Federal, state and local agencies have requested explicit statements of professional archaeological standards so that they might set up contract requirements. Some of the agencies have already begun to set up their own standards. The Society for California Archaeology has taken steps toward certification. A "Directory of Archaeological Consultants for California" is being compiled. Information about the directory may be obtained from Tom King, 830 Dexter Street, Santa Rosa, Ca. 95404. The Society for American Archaeology has been called upon to establish professional standards for various kinds of archaeological projects. After a resolution was passed at the 38th annual meeting in San Francisco (1973) for the Society to display its national leadership, a Certification Committee of three was set up at the final Executive Committee meeting for the year 1973-74. The Committee for the Recovery of Archaeological Remains; the Society for Historic Archaeology and ASCA have all requested that SAA take action. At the conference in Denver another request was made to SAA for action and a request to COPA to appoint a committee with the purpose of drawing up a plan of action. Three areas are of particular importance: consider standards for professional performance, both in training and in results of research; guidelines for evaluation of this performance; and upgrading the general management capability of the Society. In response to this request a Certification Committee was appointed and this committee is to prepare a draft of guidelines, standards and suggestions for certification mechanisms which will be presented at the meeting in November in Mexico City of AAA. Also, a detailed inquiry is being made into the possible nature and cost of establishing headquarters for SAA in Washington in conjunction with the AAA office.

1974 - LIST OF DIG DONORS - 1974

We proudly follow our custom this month and list below those who this year have supported financially our good intentions to conduct an excavation through the efforts of our sister organization, the Archaeological Research Association of Alabama, Inc. Our inability to conclude arrangements for the scheduled dig is a matter of great disappointment both to us and to our donors, but we are confident that the excavation will be accomplished next Spring. Those who made contributions during the month of October and were not previously listed are indicated in this listing with three asterisks (), and their fine checks are as greatly appreciated as all the other generous folks listed:

CHAPTER NEWS

Choccolocco Chapter met on October 17 at the Regar Museum with the speaker for this meeting being Eugene Grace. Gene gave an excellent program on the procedure and purpose of marking your artifacts. Eight members and two visitors attended this educational and enjoyable meeting.

Cullman Chapter met on October 21 at 7:30pm in City Hall. Thomas J. Hutto of Birmingham gave a very entertaining program on the hafting of tools which was greatly enjoyed by all who attended.

Huntsville Chapter met on October 15 at 7:30pm in the Fellowship Center in the Old Twickenham Hotel. Bart Henson gave an outstanding program on the "Aboriginal Rock Art of North Alabama," which was highlighted by color slides.

Muscle Shoals Chapter met at UNA in Room 121 of the Art Building on October 14. Charles Hubbert's talk this month was on the Mississippian Cultural Stage. The November 11 meeting will be concerned with artifacts of the Tennessee Valley, with Charles Hubbert presiding.

Tuscaloosa Chapter held its annual business meeting on October 1 in Room 204 of Ferguson Center. Officers for the next year were elected and include: President, Mack Brooms; Vice-President, Eugene Futato; Secretary-Treasurer, Janice Gilliland. The November meeting will be held on the 5th with the main order of business to be the final plans for the December 7th Annual Meeting.

INVITE A FRIEND

Sometimes when you see something over and over again, you get to the point where you don't really see it! On the inside back cover of your newsletters are two "cut here" sections for the paying of annual dues/membership application for new members, and for contributions to the Archaeological Research Association. These two sections are not only intended for your use, but also in order that you might have membership blanks available for any of your friends who might like to join the society. Invite your friends to attend a chapter meeting with you, show them a copy of the newsletter, tear off the back page and give it to them to use for mailing in their dues...don't worry, you'll get another one next month for another friend! 1974 was a very good year membership-wise and let us all work together to make 1975 even better.

WINTER MEETING 1974
ALABAMA ARCHAEOLOGICAL SOCIETY
HOST: TUSCALOOSA CHAPTER

DECEMBER 7, 1974
FERGUSON CENTER
THE UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA

THE ALABAMA ARCHAEOLOGICAL SOCIETY

Following are the objectives stated in our Constitution, slightly modified for emphasis: To promote informed interest in the study of Archaeology in Alabama and neighboring States; to encourage careful scientific archaeological research in such ways as surface scouting, mapping, marking, studying and especially reporting; to promote and support professionally directed excavations and discourage unsupervised "digging"; to promote the conservation of archaeological sites and to favor the passage of laws prescribing such; to oppose the sale of antiquities, and the manufacture and sale of fraudulent artifacts; to encourage and develop a better understanding of archaeology through providing Newsletters, Journals, Chapter and State meetings, helpful associates and good fellowship; to serve as a bond between individual archaeologists in the State, both non-professional and professional; and perhaps most importantly, to give everyone the opportunity to "do something about archaeology" through the accomplishment and enjoyment of these high aims.

The Society needs and welcomes as members, all persons whose ideals are in accord with the objectives set forth above. Active members receive the JOURNAL OF ALABAMA ARCHAEOLOGY, devoted to articles on the archaeology of Alabama and nearby States, and also receive the STONES & BONES NEWSLETTER, published monthly, containing news of members and their activities, also State, national and worldwide events of archaeological importance.

The coupon below may be used EITHER to APPLY FOR MEMBERSHIP in the Society, or for the PAYMENT OF ANNUAL DUES. Please be sure that your name and address are CLEARLY entered, and that checkmarks appear in applicable blanks!
